Description

Introduce company values of gender equality, diversity, and inclusion during employee onboarding and throughout the rest of the employee life cycle

Include gender equality, diversity, and inclusion in company mission and values statement

Ingrain a corporate culture and leadership model harnessing diversity

Establish corporate values and practices that make everybody's voices heard and invite women with diverse social identities to speak up such as:

- Rules at company meetings and fora to ensure that women are encouraged to make their voices heard
- Build the expectation that meeting leaders and facilitators elicit input from quieter participants
- Ensure that meeting members demonstrate equal respect/ regard for the opinions of men and women

Upskill women with targeted talent and leadership development focused on effective communication, negotiations, and leadership skills

Challenges to Implementation

Key individuals may resist change or resist being held accountable for inclusive actions

Time required to socialize all employment processes with transformational changes and embed within orientations

Gendered social norms or habits of attributing higher value to men's input than to women's input persist

Backlash may result from male participants perceiving a loss of authority

What Success Looks Like

Men and women work productively and cohesively in all business areas

Corporate business goals attained with greater level of success as corporate culture changes and inclusion goals take hold

Women and men with diverse social identities assume increasingly greater share of leadership and management positions across all areas of company

Meeting chair or facilitator manages group dynamics to afford participants equal opportunity to contribute regardless of gender or social identity; facilitator limits behavior which undermines equal participation, such as interrupting/ talking over/disregarding or undervaluing input from women and individuals with diverse social identities
